[For the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization statement of organization, see the Code of Federal Regulations, Title 32, Part 388]

The Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO) was established to develop ballistic and cruise missile defense systems that are capable of providing a limited defense of the United States and a flexible, interoperable family of theater missile defense systems that may be forward deployed to protect elements of the U.S. Armed Forces and allies of the United States. BMDO is under the authority, direction, and control of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics.

BMDO's mission is to manage and direct DOD's ballistic missile defense acquisition programs, which include theater missile defense, and to develop and deploy, if directed, a national missile defense program designed to protect the United States from a long-range missile threat posed by rogue nations. It is responsible for the continuing research and development of technologies that are relevant for long-term ballistic missile defense.

For further information, contact the Financial Management Directorate, Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, Washington, DC 20301-7100. Phone, 703-697-8710. Internet, www.acq.osd.mil/bmdo/html/bmdolink.html.

The Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency is a separately organized agency within DOD and is under the authority, direction, and control of the Director of Defense Research and Engineering. The Agency engages in research and development projects essential to DOD and conducts prototype projects that embody technology that may be incorporated into joint programs, programs in support of deployed U.S. forces, selected military department programs, or dual-use programs and, on request, assists the military departments in their research and development efforts. To this end, the Agency arranges, manages, and directs the performance of work connected with assigned advanced projects by the military departments, other Government agencies, individuals, private business entities, and educational or research institutions, as appropriate.

The Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA) was established in 1998 by the consolidation of selected elements of the Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Defense Special Weapons Agency, the On-Site Inspection Agency, and the Defense Technology Security Administration. DTRA is under the authority, direction, and control of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics. It is responsible for threat reduction to the United States and its allies from weapons of mass destruction and prevention of future threats. Through the execution of technology security activities, cooperative threat reduction programs, arms control treaty monitoring and on-site inspection, force protection, and counterproliferation, DTRA supports nuclear stockpile stewardship and technical support for nuclear weapons in DOD custody. DTRA reviews licenses for the export of U.S. technologies that could be used in the production of delivery of weapons of mass destruction or conventional weapons in order to ensure that the transfers are consistent with U.S. national security interests. It also implements the Cooperative Threat

Reduction Program, which assists former Soviet Union countries in reducing their weapons of mass destruction infrastructure.

The National Security Agency (NSA) was established in 1952, and the Central Security Service (CSS) was established in 1972. As the Nation's cryptologic organization, the Agency employs the Nation's premier codemakers and codebreakers. It ensures an informed, alert, and secure environment for U.S. warfighters and policymakers. The cryptologic resources of NSA/CSS unite to provide U.S. policymakers with intelligence information derived from America's adversaries while protecting U.S. signals and information systems from exploitation by those same adversaries.
